PROFILE

Third year architecture student with a strong passion for hands-on making, regularly designing and building small independent projects from existing and repurposed materials at my family's farm. This approach extends into my studio work, which is guided by the principles of reuse and by a deep understanding of the place and community I design for. Alongside this, my experience at a robotics startup, where I managed US client operations, represented the company internationally, and contributed to ongoing R&D, reflects my fast learning, my ability to manage several fronts in parallel, and my performance under pressure. A collaborative and motivated team member, eager to contribute to meaningful and well executed projects.
